A CRITICAL YEAR FOR MUTUAL AID

In the shadow of the COVID-19 pandemic, mutual aid and community-driven efforts to show up for each other — including funding abortion — became more critical than ever.

The ongoing health crisis and economic devastation are hurting so many, and people who call abortion funds are feeling this deeply. We gave out more grants than ever before, and the need is only growing. Many of our callers are struggling just as much — if not more — as they were at the beginning of the pandemic. Because of systemic racism and its consequent inequities, recovery is always last to reach those who are multiply marginalized, including our Black and brown neighbors, families with low incomes, service industry workers, and undocumented people.

We are committed to helping people navigate challenges to abortion access for as long as we're needed. And we are hopeful. Our incredible DCAF community has shown up, day after day, to respond to callers, fundraise for us, advocate for abortion access and racial justice, and so much more. We have ambitious plans for fiscal year 2021 to be able to fund even more callers. Stay tuned!

The DC Abortion Fund (DCAF) is an all-volunteer, 501(c)(3) nonprofit that makes grants to pregnant people in the DC area, as well as those traveling to the area, who cannot afford the full cost of an abortion. DCAF is the only organization in DC that focuses solely on providing this service in our community.
